

Where in the World...

...are Jill and Glen?

Greece or Turkey?

Our big trip this year was in September—well, our whole life is a big trip, but we still continue to plan at least one long (greater than two weeks) vacation to a new part of the world—took us sailing in the Greek islands before embarking on land/air combo in Turkey. Highlights of the trip included helping Captain Rob pull in some fresh tuna while catching the wind on the wine-dark sea; living for three nights in a cave like Fred Flintstone (complete with wireless internet) in Cappadocia; and enjoying every meal in Istanbul (not Constantinople) with a friendly cat.

Kuala Lumpur?

No, we're no longer in Malaysia. After three great years there, we left in May with regret. We had come to love the climate, food, and all the great friends we had made there, but best of all, how wonderful a base it provided for us to visit the rest of Asia. While we were there we had the chance to discover Thailand, Cambodia, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Philippines, and Micronesia! We did bring back a number of souvenirs from our time there, including Klia, the luckiest cat in the world (according to our Malaysian friends).

Wisconsin?

Jill spent a week in August at the lakes with her whole family.

Boston?

In October to visit Michael at Harvard and attend Jen & Mark's wedding.

OHIO?

Yes, believe it or not! We now own a home at
425 W 2nd Ave
Columbus, OH 43201
614-299-2742
We have a great guest room with its own bath!

Texas?

Several times! In the summer for Michael's graduation from A&M, Thanksgiving with our families, and we'll be there for Christmas, too.

Riyadh?

Smack dab in the middle of Saudi Arabia you may find Jill, as she has been spending nearly a week out of every month there working on a new project. While Glen hasn't gotten to visit yet, it's starting to seem like only a matter of time, as the project continues to gather pace. To answer the most common questions: (1) No, Jill doesn't have to wear a burka. She does wear an abaya while there, which is like a long black coat, greatly reducing her need for shopping for business clothes. (2) No, she isn't allowed to drive there, but that may be changing as the general culture is starting to see that restriction as outdated.

Komodo?

We were there in January with our good friends Rich and Louise to see the dragons.

Sulawesi?

Before we left Asia, we took a long trip to see parts of Indonesia we hadn't gotten to, including the strangely shaped island of Sulawesi, where Jill fulfilled her goal of standing at the equator on another continent (she had previously done so in both Ecuador for South America and Kenya for Africa, as well as on a boat in the Galapagos). We did some great birdwatching, got to see the tarsirs in their home environment, and had some interesting homestay experiences!

Australia?

After Indonesia, we headed further south, doing laundry in Darwin on the first day while waiting out the remnants of a cyclone. Unfortunately for our diving expedition in the Great Barrier Reef off the east coast, the cyclone's effects were still apparent—it seemed drier in the water than on the boat!
